SAUL'S NEWSSTAND

More political news, faster. Curated by Saul Anuzis

Saul's Newsstand – a FRESH look at the news

That's right...if you want you political news up to date and fast...check out Saul's Newsstand...online, on Facebook or our Mobile App!!!

Check it out...I bet you'll like it!?! All your political news in one spot!

Yes, change is in the air...and still FREE!

After over 10 years of compiling and sharing what I hope are interesting news stories, commentary and information to help folks politically engage, I'm moving to a new format and name.

My "Weekly Musing" will now be called "Saul's Newsstand - Weekly Review"

My blog post "That's Saul Folks" will now feature breaking news, gossip and prediction...available daily online...NOT a daily email...but as a feature of the Newsstand.

Saul's Newsstand will also add a "Quote of the Day" feature where I will share quotes I find inspirational, interesting, funny...or timely.

ALL of the above will be available online, on your mobile with a web friendly webpage and via a mobile app for Windows, Apple and Android phones.

We are also adding an email subscription where if you want to receive "breaking news" tips, gossip or predictions as they happen...we'll email them out to you periodically...not daily, not weekly...just when I think it's important enough for you to get an email notice.

ALL of this has been FREE and will remain FREE. I'm hooked, I love it and I normally get a few notes a week thanking me for my efforts and information.

However, in order to help pay for my hosting, email and development costs, I'm going to start putting advertising on the webpage and mobile app. Still FREE to you...but your "clicks" drive advertising revenue to us...and that is much appreciated and really helps.

www.saulsnewsstand.com

So make Saul's Newsstand your homepage. Every day...throughout the day...I'll be updating the Newsstand with the latest political news, gossip, information and an inspirational quote of the day. All for FREE.

I hope this becomes a mini-DRUDGE REPORT like site, but without all the distractions of stories about movie stars, pop culture and other things. Saul's Newsstand is going to be STRICTLY politics. Clean, informative, timely and easy to use.

Please share the Newsstand with your friends. Make it your homepage if you want a great "one stop shopping spot" for your political news from a conservative perspective. Please "click" on one of the ads once a day.

And come back often. The Newsstand will be updated constantly throughout the day with the latest stories. I plan on updated it a minimum of 4 times a day by design...and then throughout the day as interesting stories of interest pop up.

Please SHARE with your friends and send me your comments and tips.

President Elect Trump Continues to Surprise

You have to love the fact when the main stream media started complaining about all the "billionaires" and "generals" Trump was appointing to his cabinet...without hesitating he shot back that "off course" that's who is appointing. He wants successful and accomplished leaders in their respective fields to lead our nation! NO political correctness. NO apologies. NO back peddling.

Trump is building a team that's going to make this happen...yes, Make America Great Again!

It's hard to find someone not pleasantly surprised, impressed and encouraged by his picks and leadership.

Ronna Romney McDaniel for RNC Chairman

Rumors are circulating that Ronna is one of the finalist that President Elect Trump will recommend to lead the Republican National Committee.

Ronna led an impressive effort in Michigan that delivered a working class, purple state at best on behalf of Trump. She understands the dynamics of the Trump Movement and can effectively help build a national party that grows our party.

Ronna is a dynamic, effective, strategic and loyal team player who would serve the President Elect well.

As a young women, she symbolizes and represents the best our party has and can help lead a national effort to reach new voters, new demographics and new constituents to build on the Trump coalition that built this movement.

If the President Elect picks Ronna Romney McDaniel to lead our party...he will once again demonstrate his strategic understanding and determination to build a lasting movement.

The Spoils of the Republican State Conquest

In the war of ideas, a think tank is like a munitions factory, churning out the matériel to push the trench line a few miles forward. As luck would have it, Republican state lawmakers will be well equipped next year when they begin one of the largest conservative offensives in recent memory. Come January the GOP will hold "trifectas"—total control of both legislative chambers and the governorship—in 25 states, up from 10 in 2009.

If lawmakers have any questions about where to begin, one place with answers is the State Policy Network, a federation of 65 free-market think tanks ranging from Anchorage, Alaska, to San Juan, Puerto Rico. "At the end of the day, people want jobs. They want security. That's our bread and butter," says Tracie Sharp, the group's president. "We feel like for such a time as this, we've built up this network. We need to really run. This is a state moment."

Donald Trump Has Disrupted Years of Broken Taiwan Policy

Mr. Trump is now the butt of similarly ill-informed commentary by both media figures and former U.S. diplomats who should know better. For the record, let me interject that the United States does not now recognize, and never has, a "One China" of which Taiwan is a part.

The December 15, 1978, U.S.-China Normalization Communiqué states that the U.S. side "acknowledges the Chinese position that there is but one China and Taiwan is part of China." It is often forgotten that two months later, on February 22, 1979, President Carter's deputy secretary of state, Warren Christopher, explained in Senate hearings that the United States has "acknowledged the Chinese position that Taiwan is part of China, but the United States has not [italics in original] itself agreed to this position." This remains the position of the United States today.

On the matter of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, which the Chinese have so strenuously resisted, I recall during my tenure on the Taiwan desk in 1982 that Chinese diplomats demanded that President Reagan honor President Carter's "pledge" to terminate arms sales to Taiwan after normalization. China demanded that Reagan issue another communiqué promising to cease arms transfers to Taiwan. James Lilley, President Reagan's top China advisor in the White House, asked President Carter about this pledge, and the former president said, "I never made such a commitment. I can tell you that I wouldn't have made it." Reagan then ordered that thenceforth communiqué negotiations with Beijing be grounded in the understanding that no "pledge" was ever issued and that arms sales to Taiwan would be eased off only on the understanding that China pursued a peaceful resolution of its differences with Taiwan.

<http://nationalinterest.org/feature/donald-trump-has-disrupted-years-broken-taiwan-policy-18609>

Trump, Taiwan and an Uproar: Putting China on the defensive.

Taiwan is no more important in 2016 than it was in 1972. Accepting the one-China policy never shifted the fundamental reality of Taiwan-U.S. relations, but it gave cover for the Chinese in a strategic context that has long ago disappeared. This puts China in a very difficult situation. China desperately needs access to American markets to avoid slipping deeper into economic stagnation. It understands that trade relations with the U.S. are a core strategic interest. At the same time, President Xi Jinping needs to appear as a strong and intimidating force in the world to bolster his position in China.

Trump signaled to China that he can take away what Nixon gave them. By doing what Nixon did – using volatility and unpredictability to intimidate – Trump set the stage for a negotiation that China can't refuse. China must have access to American markets even if the terms become less favorable. Previous presidents were prepared to posture but did nothing substantial about China. With a single phone call, Trump did what he seems to do best – baffle and unnerve a negotiating partner. Is he crafty or is he crazy? Trump has shifted the issue from what China is willing to do, to how far Trump is prepared to go.

Saul's Newsstand - Weekly Review 12-18-16

Saul Anuzis

New York - Trump Tower

I've been in New York for the last couple of days with lots of meetings, catching up with old friends and just amazed at the buzz and activity around Trump Tower.

Team Trump is in full swing and the Republic is safe. Merry Christmas.

Hillary Clinton did NOT win the Popular Vote

Hillary Clinton lost fair and square. Both the Trump campaign and the Clinton campaign ran by the existing "winner take all" rules which forces candidates to campaign in only about 12 "battle ground states". Over 90% of all campaign resources, visits and efforts took place in 12 or so states...with 38 states being totally ignored by each campaign, as they are decidedly either Republican or Democrat.

Yes, Hillary Clinton got "more votes" throughout America...but who cares, it doesn't matter. Running up votes in California, New York or Texas are irrelevant under the current "winner take all" rules within the Electoral College.

Donald Trump won...and won in a landslide where it mattered...in the swing, battle ground states nationwide. And there is NO doubt that if Trump has run a "national campaign" he would have won the "national popular vote" overwhelmingly.

The Democrats "sore looser man" efforts to try and discredit the Trump victory, of blame Hillary's loss on the Russians or come up with any other lame excuse to delegitimize the elections are nothing more than a charade.

It's President Elect Donald Trump! Get over it...learn to deal with it. We accepted, tolerated and now celebrate President Obama's coming and going (more so going). It's the way our process works.

Hacking Controversy over Elections

It's kind of funny. Hillary Clinton and the Democrats are complaining about "someone" hacking the DNC and campaign emails - then releasing them to the public. This was a deliberate attempt to influence the elections.

The released emails showed how the Clinton campaign and the DNC collaborated to influence the nomination of Hillary Clinton over Bernie Sanders...and influence the election in general.

Poetic justice...and a little hypocrisy...maybe?!?

P.S. no one is claiming anyone actually hacked any actual voting machines to manipulate the numbers...it's just the embarrassing emails they want investigated:) Blaming Russia is sure popular these days...how about the fact Hillary was a LOUSY candidate?!?

Trump Continues to Surprise

It's hard not to love the strong, competent, effective and accomplished leaders President Elect Trump is selecting to serve in his cabinet. He is setting the tone for things to come. Already American companies are re-investing in America...bringing and keeping jobs HERE. The regulatory and tax reforms being proposed will make America competitive again...yes, help make America Great Again.

It truly is going to be a Merry Christmas for most! Liberals...call George Soros for subsidies, fake news and fake public outrage/demonstrations.

How Populism Can Rejuvenate American Conservatism's Ideas

Since Donald Trump's surprise victory several weeks ago, a debate has raged in conservative circles over to what extent, if any, conservatives should adopt some of Trump's more "populist" tendencies and policies. While Trump's takeover of the Republican Party and ascension to the presidency are complete, there clearly remains resistance in some conservative circles. However, a grand merger between conservatism and populism is a logical inevitability that will boost both the movement and, more importantly, the nation. That's because at its core, conservatism is a populist movement.

Princeton University's Wordnet defines populism as "the political doctrine that supports the rights and powers of the common people in their struggle with the privileged elite," which is a reasonably fair description. Unlike other political philosophies, populism does not clearly offer specific policy prescriptions, rather a framework through which to view policies: whether they help the working man and woman. This fits perfectly within conservatism.

Conservatives share a natural skepticism of the ruling class, recognizing the corrupting influence of power. It is one of man's seemingly inescapable flaws that upon taking power he engages in rent-seeking behavior or misuses power for personal profit. Recognizing this weakness, George Washington did a great service, setting the precedence of only serving two terms as president. Rather than trust elites, conservatives have faith in the ingenuity of the average citizen and aim to have citizens retain as much power as possible. Entrusting the citizenry over elites? Sure sounds populist to me.

<http://thefederalist.com/2016/12/14/populism-can-rejuvenate-american-conservatisms-ideas/>

Love this story: How Clinton lost Michigan — and blew the election

P.S. Not to mention Hillary was a LOUSY candidate!!!

Everybody could see Hillary Clinton was cooked in Iowa. So when, a week-and-a-half out, the Service Employees International Union started hearing anxiety out of Michigan, union officials decided to reroute their volunteers, giving a desperate team on the ground around Detroit some hope.

They started prepping meals and organizing hotel rooms.

SEIU — which had wanted to go to Michigan from the beginning, but been ordered not to — dialed Clinton's top campaign aides to tell them about the new plan. According to several people familiar with the call, Brooklyn was furious.

Turn that bus around, the Clinton team ordered SEIU. Those volunteers needed to stay in Iowa to fool Donald Trump into competing there, not drive to Michigan, where the Democrat's models projected a 5-point win through the morning of Election Day.

Michigan organizers were shocked. It was the latest case of Brooklyn ignoring on-the-ground intel and pleas for help in a race that they felt slipping away at the end.

An Enemy of the Kremlin Dies in London

Who killed Alexander Perepilichny?

On November 10, 2012, Alexander Perepilichny was feeling a little under the weather. He decided to try to shake it off by taking a few laps around the gated community southwest of London where Russian émigrés like him lived in multimillion-dollar mansions alongside members of the English elite. Perepilichny jogged through a neighborhood of homes once owned by Elton John, Kate Winslet, John Lennon, and Ringo Starr.

He collapsed on Granville Road, within 100 meters of the house he was renting for $20,000 a month. Police and medics were called to the scene, but within 30 minutes, Perepilichny was pronounced dead.

Police told the press the death was "unexplained." A 44-year-old man of average build and above-average wealth had simply fallen down and died in the leafy suburb he'd recently begun calling home.

Among the material facts not known at the time was that Perepilichny was in good health, as proved by a physical he'd had for a life-insurance policy soon before his death. That he'd traveled that morning from Paris, where he had, inexplicably, reserved two hotel rooms in different parts of the city for the same nights. That he'd been meeting with a man he said was from the Russian government, but who was actually an affiliate of a Russian criminal syndicate. And that he'd gotten an ominous phone call informing him that police had found his name on a hit list in the home of an alleged Chechen contract killer.

China's Unfinished Trade Revolution

Dec. 11 marks the 15th anniversary of China's accession to the World Trade Organization. Measured by its impact on the Chinese economy, which has grown almost tenfold since 2001, accession to the WTO was no less momentous than the epochal changes ushered in by the start of "Reform and Opening" in 1978 or the fiscal and political recentralization that followed the 1989 Tiananmen crisis. In the scale and speed of changes it wrought on Chinese society and politics, WTO accession was hardly less revolutionary than the Great Leap Forward of 1958-1961 or the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution of 1966-1976. And in terms of their import for the structure of the global economy, few events in recent memory equal China's entry into the organization. By virtually any indicator, Dec. 11, 2001, was an inflection point not only for China's economy but also for much of the world's. But the anniversary also highlights how Chinese integration into the global economy remains incomplete.

On Sunday, a key provision contained in Article 15 of China's WTO accession protocols will expire. At issue is what countries must do to make the case that China is subsidizing exports as a way to undercut competition abroad. The provision stipulates that unless producers in China can "clearly show that market conditions prevail" in a given sector, WTO members importing Chinese goods from that sector can use a different methodology for assessing whether to impose anti-dumping measures. Rather than compare Chinese domestic and export prices for a good (the standard procedure for market economies), the provision allows WTO members to compare Chinese prices with rates for the same good in countries with similar levels of development. In practice, this provision makes it much easier to launch anti-dumping investigations in the WTO and to impose protective tariffs on Chinese imports than if China were recognized as a market economy.

Don't Assume That Russia Hacked the U.S. Election

The attribution of a cyber attack to a particular nation-state often relies on the results of previous assessments, and on the assumption that those earlier assessments were correct. Problem is, there's rarely any affirmative validation. If we correctly identify North Korea as the perpetrator of a hack, no North Korean official will come forward and say "Whoops! You got us!"

Many security experts doubted the FBI's original assessment of the Sony hack, including one researcher who previously infiltrated Sony's network himself. Sony Group has a long and well-documented history of network breaches across all its subsidiaries. Why did the FBI blame North Korea and not "somebody sitting in a bed someplace?"

Assessing a cyber attack is more art than science. Intelligence analysis deals with information that is often intentionally deceptive. As Central Intelligence Agency veteran Richards Heuer, Jr. explains, "The significance of information is always a joint function of the nature of the information and the context in which it is interpreted."

This feels uncomfortable to those who want to be sure beyond a reasonable doubt. Extraordinary claims require extraordinary evidence, and the idea that a nuclear-armed state stole Democratic National Committee emails to interfere with the U.S. election is a pretty extraordinary claim. After all, multinational corporations have suffered much bigger data breaches at the hands of hackers with far fewer resources.

Unfortunately, intelligence agencies tend to avoid revealing their sources, lest they alienate their allies. As we learned from Edward Snowden's leaked documents, the National Security Agency relies on "fourth party collection," which entails stealing information that foreign agencies have collected on their own surveillance targets. For example, the NSA has spied on South Korea to find out what South Korea has learned from spying on North Korea.

Intelligence agencies expect people to trust them, but they also have to earn that trust. It was only last Friday that President Obama ordered a review of potential election-related hacking.

While the idea of Russian meddling might fit conveniently into the collective disbelief that Donald Trump could have won the election fairly, we should probably demand more evidence before freaking out.

George Soros, Big Banks And Google Fund Anti-Trump Resistance Group

The liberal think tank Center for American Progress (CAP), now fashioning itself as a powerful anti-Trump force, is funded by George Soros, big banks and several large corporations.

CAP, founded in 2003 by former Hillary Clinton campaign chair John Podesta, has long been a prominent liberal think tank in Washington. Now, they look to be the leader of efforts on the left to fight against Donald Trump's incoming administration through their advocacy wing, the Center for American Progress Action Fund (CAPAF).

The action fund is funded by the main group, CAP, according to their "Our Supporters" page. Other funders of CAPAF are the big Hollywood group Motion Picture Association of America and the labor union Service Employees International Union.

The home page of CAPAF simply reads "Resist," and has a button to "Join the Resistance." On the actual page describing the resistance, posted Thursday, it says, "RESIST HATE. RESIST CORRUPTION. RESIST INJUSTICE. FORGE PROGRESS."

Putin's Revenge

Twenty years before Vladimir Putin began his ingenious campaign to influence the U.S. presidential election, his predecessor as Russia's president stood on a dark street near the White House. In his underpants. Looking for a pizza.

It was September 1994, and Boris Yeltsin was in Washington for a state visit with his new friend, President Bill Clinton. The Soviet Union had collapsed just three years earlier, and a relationship was blossoming between the U.S. and Russia, one that held the promise of burying decades of hostility. Russia's abrupt transition from communist dictatorship was chaotic, but a fragile democratic process and nascent capitalism were taking hold. U.S. officials entertained visions of a Western-friendly Russia as a partner in a stable and secure Europe. To that end, Clinton and Yeltsin had built an alliance on the shared goal of preventing a revanchist security state from taking power in Moscow and returning the U.S. and Russia to a Cold War state of hostility. During one early visit to Moscow, Clinton told a young audience to "choose hope over fear" and "find a new definition of Russia's greatness."

Rarely had an American and a Russian leader been so chummy. Clinton and Yeltsin were buddies, two lovable rascals with big appetites. But something else was different as well: For the first time in decades, Russia was the obvious number two in the relationship. Stripped of its Iron Curtain puppet states, its economy in tatters and its military breaking down, Russia was a shrinking, messy place. And its president was becoming an embarrassment. A presumed alcoholic, Yeltsin would often lose his balance in public, sending aides scurrying to prop him back up. In one slurred telephone conversation with Clinton, the Russian proposed that the men hold a secret meeting on a submarine.

But nothing could top that fall night in 1994. While staying at Blair House—the guest residence for visiting foreign dignitaries across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House—Yeltsin slipped past his security, stumbled down the stairs and stepped onto the street. "Pizza! Pizza!" he blurted at the Secret Service agents who intercepted him. (There are two versions of the story: In one that Clinton himself told to a biographer, Yeltsin is on the street; in another, he's stopped before he makes it out the door.)

The next day, Clinton and Yeltsin had a long and friendly meeting. Their fates were connected: Clinton wanted a friendly and stable Russia as a foreign policy success story. Yeltsin needed American money to avoid a total economic collapse. When Clinton raised plans to expand the NATO alliance into eastern Europe, Yeltsin didn't object. The men even agreed that Russia itself might one day join NATO—a concept that seems downright ludicrous today, as Putin threatens the alliance with nuclear exercises. At a press conference afterwards, the two men clowned around. Yeltsin was in an antic state that one White House aide dubbed "high jabberwocky," while Clinton himself doubled over with laughter at his Russian friend's playfulness.

Looking back today, the scene is infused with almost unbelievable optimism: the idea that the U.S. and Russia could be military allies, with one helping the other to grow an open and truly democratic society.

Saul's Newsstand – a FRESH look at the news

That's right...if you want you political news up to date and fast...check out Saul's Newsstand...online, on Facebook or our Mobile App!!!

Check it out...I bet you'll like it!?! All your political news in one spot!

Yes, change is in the air...and still FREE!

After over 10 years of compiling and sharing what I hope are interesting news stories, commentary and information to help folks politically engage, I'm moving to a new format and name.

My "Weekly Musing" will now be called "Saul's Newsstand - Weekly Review"

My blog post "That's Saul Folks" will now feature breaking news, gossip and prediction...available daily online...NOT a daily email...but as a feature of the Newsstand.

Saul's Newsstand will also add a "Quote of the Day" feature where I will share quotes I find inspirational, interesting, funny...or timely.

ALL of the above will be available online, on your mobile with a web friendly webpage and via a mobile app for Windows, Apple and Android phones.

We are also adding an email subscription where if you want to receive "breaking news" tips, gossip or predictions as they happen...we'll email them out to you periodically...not daily, not weekly...just when I think it's important enough for you to get an email notice.

ALL of this has been FREE and will remain FREE. I'm hooked, I love it and I normally get a few notes a week thanking me for my efforts and information.

However, in order to help pay for my hosting, email and development costs, I'm going to start putting advertising on the webpage and mobile app. Still FREE to you...but your "clicks" drive advertising revenue to us...and that is much appreciated and really helps.

www.saulsnewsstand.com

So make Saul's Newsstand your homepage. Every day...throughout the day...I'll be updating the Newsstand with the latest political news, gossip, information and an inspirational quote of the day. All for FREE.

I hope this becomes a mini-DRUDGE REPORT like site, but without all the distractions of stories about movie stars, pop culture and other things. Saul's Newsstand is going to be STRICTLY politics. Clean, informative, timely and easy to use.

Please share the Newsstand with your friends. Make it your homepage if you want a great "one stop shopping spot" for your political news from a conservative perspective. Please "click" on one of the ads once a day.

And come back often. The Newsstand will be updated constantly throughout the day with the latest stories. I plan on updated it a minimum of 4 times a day by design...and then throughout the day as interesting stories of interest pop up.

Please SHARE with your friends and send me your comments and tips.

The Top Issues for States in 2017

With 2016 coming to a close, most state lawmakers are heading back to their state capitols to tackle many important issues. Highlighted below are some of the biggest problems facing the states.

Budget and Tax. States are seeking ways to create a better business climate to attract jobs and businesses. Some states have been passing right-to-work laws, pushing tax reform, and reforming their public-pension systems, while others have increased taxes and regulations. More states are likely to implement work requirements and other welfare reforms to help move people from government dependency to self-sufficiency.

Education Reform. Education outcomes in America continue to lag globally, even though per-pupil spending in the United States is much higher than spending in other nations. Many states have responded by expanding school choice through increased access to charter schools, vouchers, education savings accounts (ESAs), parent-trigger programs, and tax-credit scholarships. Additionally, some states are continuing to fight back against Common Core State Standards and Common Core-related testing mandates, which lower quality and remove important, traditional methods of teaching.

Energy and Environment. The United States has become a leader in energy production, despite efforts made by radical environmentalists to discourage the use of traditional energy sources, such as coal, natural gas, and oil. This is due to several factors, including the development of effective horizontal drilling techniques and the rise of hydraulic fracturing, commonly called fracking. It has also occurred because concerns related to global warming have diminished. With the Clean Power Plan on life support, state lawmakers are much more likely to consider pro-environment, pro-energy, and pro-jobs solutions in 2017.

Health Care. States continue to look at ways to help expand competition and reduce the cost of health care - even with the future of the Affordable Care Act uncertain. Solutions being discussed include using telemedicine, rolling back certificate of need laws, and embracing direct primary care. Nineteen states opted not to expand Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act, and now it is likely additional waivers seeking to fix some of the problems that have plagued the program for years will be approved by the incoming Trump administration.

Constitutional Reform. State elected officials are increasingly concerned by the national government's lack of fiscal discipline. Many are considering the use of Article V of the U.S. Constitution to restore the role of the states and to prevent burdening future generations with ever-greater government debt.

The Heartland Institute's Ten State Solutions to Emerging Issues is an informative and concise booklet examining 10 of the most useful public policy solutions to important issues facing the states. The solutions identified are proven reform ideas that have gained significant momentum among the states and with legislators in recent years.

The Heartland Institute is happy to provide free copies of Ten State Solutions to Emerging Issues, send an expert to your state to testify or brief your caucus, help organize an event, or provide additional research on these issues. If you have any questions or comments, please contact John Nothdurft, director of government relations, at John@heartland.org or by calling 312/377-4000.

Tax Credit Scholarship Programs Save Taxpayers Billions, Report Finds

In this article for School Reform News, Managing Editor Teresa Mull writes about a new report from EdChoice that found publicly funded private school choice programs save taxpayers billions of dollars, because many students leave government schools. The report analyzed the fiscal impact of 10 tax-credit scholarships in seven states - representing 93 percent of all scholarships awarded in tax-credit scholarship programs today - and found these programs generated cumulative net savings worth between $1.7 billion and $3.4 billion compared to when they were launched to 2014. This adds up to between $1,650 and $3,000 per scholarship issued. Read more

Utah Counties Sue Federal Government to Halt 'Illegal' Coal Leasing Moratorium

POLICY NEWSPAPER

In this article from Environment & Climate News, Managing Editor H. Sterling Burnett writes about six Utah counties that are suing the U.S. Department of Interior (DOI) in a federal District Court. The counties are suing to overturn a moratorium on federal coal leases the secretary of the interior issued in January 2016. The six counties party to the lawsuit - Beaver, Carbon, Garfield, Kane, Piute, and San Juan Counties - are asking the court to enjoin the moratorium for violating the Administrative Procedure Act and to award the counties the costs involved in fighting the suit. The counties, which are economically dependent upon coal, claim DOI and the Bureau of Land Management violated the 1969 National Environmental Policy Act by unilaterally issuing the moratorium before carrying out a required pre-moratorium impact statement. ##### Research & Commentary: Dramatic Gas Tax Hike Won't Help Alaska Maintain Its Roads

In this Research & Commentary, Senior Policy Analyst Matthew Glans examines a budget proposal from Alaska Gov. Bill Walker (I) that includes a doubling of the state's gasoline tax from 8 cents per gallon to 16 cents per gallon on July 1, 2017, which would then increase to 24 cents per gallon on July 1, 2018. Taxes on maritime fuel, aviation gas, and jet fuel would also rise at the same rate. Increasing the tax on the sale of motor fuel, Glans says, increases the cost of transportation, which harms all consumers, including many low-income people. Glans also says it is not appropriate to add the burden of additional taxes or fee increases on households that are already cash-strapped. He recommends Alaska legislators instead explore more modern and efficient ways to fund road construction and traffic infrastructure, such as privatizing roads and establishing toll systems. ## REPUBLICAN LIBERTY CAUCUS OF OHIO SEES OPPORTUNITY IN ELECTION OF TIMKEN TO LEAD ORP

(Columbus, Ohio) January 9, 2017: The Republican Liberty Caucus of Ohio (RLCOH) congratulates Jane Timken in her election as Chairwoman of the Ohio Republican Party.

While many have correctly framed this race between Matt Borges and Jane Timken as a battle between the Kasich and Trump camps, there is much more here than first meets the eye.

Says RLCOH Chairman, Bill Yarbrough, "We were very excited to see Ms. Timken run on a pledge to correct some very specific problems with the ORP and are confident these matters will be addressed.

Specifically, the RLCOH has been vocal about:

- ORP leadership violating its own by-laws in advocating for the defeat of specific Republican candidates for office.
- ORP leadership expressing reluctance to stand for liberty ideals in a party platform like Right to Work, more freedom, less regulation, less taxation, and smaller budgets.
- ORP leadership utilizing party funds for questionable practices.

Ms. Timken appears poised to tackle these issues head-on.

RLCOH Board member Ann Becker cast her vote for Ms. Timken as a State Central Committee member from Butler County. "Jane has the leadership style needed to make the Ohio Republican Party one of the strongest parties in the nation. Her focus on transparency and inclusiveness of differing ideas will help strengthen the relationship between grassroots Republicans and the Party. I am excited to work with her."

Kentucky Hits the Ground Running, Becomes 27th Right-to-Work State

On January 7, Kentucky became the nation's 27th state to pass right-to-work legislation. Implemented in 1947, the Taft-Hartley Act (THA) allows states to adopt right-to-work laws. Right-to-work gives employees the freedom to choose whether to join a labor union and pay union dues.

According to the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation, "A Right to Work law secures the right of employees to decide for themselves whether or not to join or financially support a union. However, employees who work in the railway or airline industries are not protected by a Right to Work law, and employees who work on a federal enclave may not be. Moreover, a Right to Work law does not prohibit limitations on when a dues deduction authorization card can be revoked." 0

Kentucky has one of the highest union membership rates in the South, and many analysts believe that is because it is one of only a few states in the region without a right-to-work law.

Bill McMorris, a staff writer for the Washington Free Beacon, wrote in a recent article, "About 200,000 Kentucky workers were dues-paying union members in 2015, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Union membership has grown in recent years, with a membership rate of 11 percent of the workforce—a 28 percent increase from 2009."

According the Bluegrass Institute, in the first week of the 2017 legislative session, the Kentucky Legislature passed and Gov. Matt Bevin (R) signed laws addressing the following issues:

- Kentucky became a right-to-work state. No longer are Kentuckians forced to join a union as a condition of employment.
- Kentucky made legislators' pensions transparent.
- Kentucky repealed the arbitrary and artificial "prevailing-wage" requirements on public projects, saving taxpayers millions of dollars on new schools and government buildings.
- Kentucky prohibited union dues from being used to fund politics.

- And Kentucky determined that union membership should come with an “opt-in” requirement, not just a de facto “yes” that one must later opt out of.

F. Vincent Vernuccio, the Mackinac Center’s director of labor policy, pointed out in a recent Wall Street Journal article voters in right-to-work states have rewarded lawmakers who supported the change, writing, “[T]he union’s bark is a lot worse than its bite when it comes to the election afterward.”

Vernuccio also suggested Kentucky could be the first of several states to pass right-to-work legislation in 2017. “We may see up to 29 [states] before the spring. You’re definitely seeing a snowball effect, and more and more states are looking to give workers freedom.”

States that do not have right-to-work policies should consider implementing them. As the experience of other states shows, right-to-work legislation has a positive effect on states’ economies, workers, and population growth.

Roadmap for the 21st Century: Welfare Reform

This paper, authored by the Roadmap for the 21st Century Working Group on Poverty and Welfare Reform, describes the “perverse incentives stemming from our outdated, fossilized welfare system” and shows how those incentives can be reversed. The paper summarizes the reform proposals offered by House Speaker Paul Ryan (R-WI) and U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL), and it reveals a new plan that would make the Ryan and Rubio proposals even more effective. The plan described by the Working Group authors would maintain the necessary social safety net while also making it more effective and less economically burdensome on taxpayers. Read more

Research & Commentary: Cuomo’s ‘Free’ Tuition Plan Won’t Help Poor Students or Reduce College Costs

In this Research & Commentary, Policy Analyst Tim Benson examines New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo’s (D) plan to provide “free” tuition at all Empire State public colleges and universities for students whose families are earning up to $125,000 per year. Because lower-income students already qualify for enough aid to pay for tuition at New York state universities, most of the students who will be helped by this bill will be from middle- and upper-middle-income households, which means New York’s lower- and middle-income families will be paying taxes to subsidize the higher education of children belonging to their affluent and upper-middle-income neighbors. Instead of instituting what would amount to a welfare program for upper-middle-income households, Benson argues, New York would be better off directing this money to school choice programs for low-income K-12 students stuck in poorly performing neighborhood public schools, such as tax credit scholarship programs and education savings account plans. ##### Purdue Researchers Find GMO Ban Would Result in Higher Food Prices and Greenhouse-Gas Emissions

In this story published in Environment & Climate News, Managing Editor H. Sterling Burnett writes about a new study in the Journal of Environmental Protection. Authored by researchers at Purdue University, the study claims a global ban on genetically modified organisms (GMOs) would result in higher carbon-dioxide emissions and cost billions of dollars in lost welfare. Absent the use of GMO crops, the study finds food prices would be between 0.27 percent and 2.2 percent higher, depending on the region. The study also argues if countries that currently plant GMO crops increase the amount of GMOs they plant to levels comparable to that of the United States, greenhouse-gas emissions would fall by approximately 0.2 billion tons of carbon dioxide globally and up to two million acres of land would revert to forests, grasslands, and wetlands. The co-authors also suggest the development of standards that are academically detailed and specific. The study highlights efforts to update well-respected history standards in six states: Alabama, California, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, and South Carolina. For instance, the study points to California's recent standards update in 2016, which, according to the authors, yielded standards that have been poorly received compared to past standards implemented in California and elsewhere. The authors also say the standards in California have drawn accusations of partisanship and ideological bias. Read more

Missed Heartland's Emerging Issues Forum in Orlando? Watch It Online!

On December 15, The Heartland Institute hosted its 2016 Winter Emerging Issues Forum (EIF). More than 120 state elected officials and policy experts from 23 states attended this magical EIF in Orlando, Florida.

Tennessee state Rep. Mike Sparks (R-Rutherford) praised Heartland's winter EIF event, stating, "As a state legislator, you may often feel alone on a few issues, but having The Heartland Institute as a resource is invaluable."

YouTube channel.

The education panel featured Tennessee state Rep. John J. DeBerry Jr. (R-Shelby County), Jamie Gass, the Pioneer Institute's director of the Center for School Reform, and Lisa Snell, the Reason Foundation's director of education and child welfare. The panelists discussed how education outcomes in America continue to lag globally, the debate over Common Core State Standards, and educational choice options such as education savings accounts and charter schools. The panel also analyzed the roadblocks currently facing lawmakers who are working to transform education. Watch a video of the education panel here.

The health care panel featured Beacon Center of Tennessee Director of Policy Lindsay Boyd, clinical endocrinologist Dr. Richard O. Dolinar, and Sal Nuzzo, the James Madison Institute's policy director. The panelists discussed how states could expand competition and reduce the cost of health care (even with the Affordable Care Act in place). Solutions discussed included using telemedicine, rolling back certificate of need laws, and embracing direct primary care. Watch a video of the health care panel here.

The energy and environment panel featured Maine state Rep. Beth A. O'Connor (R-Berwick), Amy Oliver Cooke, the Independence Institute's vice president and the director of the energy policy center, and Spark of Freedom Foundation President James Taylor. The panelists discussed how America has become a leader in energy production despite President Barack Obama's efforts to discourage the use of traditional energy sources, such as coal, natural gas, and oil. This panel also discussed the rise of hydraulic fracturing, the demise of renewable power mandates, and pro-environment, pro-energy, and pro-jobs solutions to America's energy and environment problems. Watch a video of the energy and environment panel here.

The budget and tax panel featured West Virginia state Del. John Overington (R-Berkeley), Beacon Center of Tennessee Director of Policy Lindsay Boyd, and State Budget Solutions President Bob Williams. The panelists discussed ways states are seeking to create a better business climate to attract jobs and businesses to their states. The panelists also discussed right-to-work laws, tax reform, and reforming public pension systems. Watch a video of the budget and tax panel here.

Stay tuned as Heartland prepares to host its 2017 Emerging Issues Forum!

Research & Commentary: Dramatic Gas Tax Hike Won't Help Alaska Maintain Its Roads

Alaska Gov. Bill Walker (I) recently introduced a proposal that would hike the state's gas tax rate as part of his 2018 budget plan. The tax would quadruple from 8 cents per gallon to 24 cents per gallon on July 1, 2018. In this Research & Commentary, Matthew Glans argues Alaska legislators should explore more modern and efficient ways to fund road construction and traffic infrastructure, such as privatizing roads and establishing toll systems. #### Roadmap for the 21st Century: Education Choice

This paper, authored by the Roadmap for the 21st Century Working Group on Education, describes how education choice and competition improve educational outcomes for both those students who take advantage of choice opportunities as well as those who remain in traditional public schools. The authors also outline how education choice would improve economic prosperity at the national and state levels. According to the authors, "If all American students and their parents were free to choose the school they believed would work best for them, [educational achievement gaps] could be closed. Nationwide, that would mean an increase in U.S. GDP of up to 17% to 30%, or $3.1 trillion to $5.2 trillion over 25 years, given the current level of U.S. GDP." Read more

Utah Counties Sue Federal Government Over Coal Lease Moratorium

In this article for Environment & Climate News, reporter Kenneth Artz writes about a lawsuit filed against the U.S.

POLICY NEWSPAPER

Department of the Interior (DOI) and the Bureau of Land Management by Utah's Kane and Garfield Counties, which argues they and other rural communities around Utah will be economically devastated by the loss of hundreds of jobs and the closing of crucial mining sites if the Obama administration's moratorium on new coal leases on federal lands continues. The Obama administration, Artz notes, issued the moratorium in January 2015 as part of its review and overhaul of the coal-leasing program managed by DOI. The Obama administration says the moratorium was necessary due to concerns related to the theory man is causing climate change and because the administration wanted to examine whether taxpayers are receiving a fair return on the leases. However, now that Donald Trump is entering the White House, the dispute could be short-lived. Read more

The Case for Licensing Dental Therapists in North Dakota

A joint publication of The Heartland Institute and Texas Public Policy Foundation, this Policy Brief makes a case for the licensing of dental therapists in North Dakota to improve access to basic and preventative oral care. The Policy Brief was authored by Michael Hamilton and Bette Grande, both research fellows at The Heartland Institute, and John Davidson, a senior fellow at the Texas Public Policy Foundation. Grande served as a North Dakota state representative from 1996 to 2014, representing the 41st district. The authors urge North Dakota to follow the example set in Maine, Minnesota, and Vermont, which have proven licensing dental therapists is a win-win for residents and dentistry professionals. The report includes 64 footnotes citing research concerning the benefits of dental therapy. Read more

The Thomas Jefferson Institute Releases New Hospital Study

The Thomas Jefferson Institute recently released its annual analysis of Virginia hospitals' financial wellbeing, titled Virginia's Hospitals: Doing Well in a Sluggish Economy. The report confirms the hospital industry in Virginia has continued to enjoy solid earnings, and the authors say the industry's financial health remains strong. This year's study, authored by President Michael W. Thompson, shows hospitals earned a profit of $1.89 billion in 2015, slightly less than the $1.9 billion in 2014 - a difference of only six-one-hundredths of one percent. Additionally, the net worth of hospitals increased by 6.6 percent, or about $1.1 billion. Thompson found in the report, "Over the past four years - from 2012 through 2015 - the number of hospitals running in the red has decreased by 35% - from 42 in 2012 to 27 in 2015." Read more

The January 2017 issue of Budget & Tax News reports on the election of Donald Trump, Republicans' continued control of both houses of Congress ... and what it all might mean for downsizing the federal government. Genevieve Wood, a senior fellow at The Heritage Foundation, gave taxpayers reason for hope: "I think you can expect to see bold reforms, and by that, I mean a real shrinking back and pulling back of the federal government's power when it comes to taxes, regulations, [and] telling people how to live their everyday lives."

Dear Representative Reineke:

I urge you to not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

I believe that H.R. 785 would result in lowering my wages, weaken my pension and would create a less safe working environment for me and my co-workers.

Ignoring the facts about "right to work" far-right politicians across the country are promoting these deceptive policies as payback to their Big Business donors. By weakening workers' ability to have a say about their job, right to work weakens unions' ability to serve as an advocate for all workers and a check against corporate greed.

Without solid evidence to back their claims, the politicians advancing right-to-work legislation depend on a coordinated network of extremist right-wing groups to provide resources, research, and an echo chamber that pave the way for right to work.

Within the Railroad Industry, our union negotiates contracts for our members that provide good wages, continued vigilant oversight of safety and the protection of our pension (Railroad Retirement).

For all of Organized Labor, please do not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

Hi Stuart,

Thank you for sending this to me. I appreciate hearing from you. HR 785 is federal legislation that Congress is considering. I would encourage you to contact Congressman Jim Jordan to voice your opinion on this matter. You can do so by visiting his website www.jordan.house.gov.

Dear friends,

I am pleased to announce the upcoming release of the full 9th edition of Rich States, Poor States: ALEC-Laffer State Economic Competitiveness Index. With 2017 state legislative sessions underway across the nation, the research compiled in Rich States, Poor States is essential for those looking to improve the economic competitiveness of their state. This edition includes chapters on "The State of the State - An Analysis of State Fiscal Trends," "Why States Shouldn't Tax Death" and "Right-to-Work is Working for states." The right-to-work chapter is proving especially timely, as right-to-work legislation recently passed in Kentucky and has been introduced in both Missouri and New Hampshire.

I hope you can join us for an exclusive conference call to preview the full 9th edition with Reagan economist Dr. Arthur Laffer, and Steve Moore of the Heritage Foundation. More information is below:

Subject: I urge you to not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

Dear Representative Reineke:

I urge you to not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

I believe that H.R. 785 would result in lowering my wages, weaken my pension and would create a less safe working environment for me and my co-workers.

Ignoring the facts about "right to work" far-right politicians across the country are promoting these deceptive policies as payback to their Big Business donors. By weakening workers' ability to have a say about their job, right to work weakens unions' ability to serve as an advocate for all workers and a check against corporate greed.

Without solid evidence to back their claims, the politicians advancing right-to-work legislation depend on a coordinated network of extremist right-wing groups to provide resources, research, and an echo chamber that pave the way for right to work.

Within the Railroad Industry, our union negotiates contracts for our members that provide good wages, continued vigilant oversight of safety and the protection of our pension (Railroad Retirement).

For all of Organized Labor, please do not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

Sincerely,

Adam Kellem

States, Look Out: Don't Let Licensing Boards Limit Access to Quality Care

The Hill | Mia Heck | Director, Health and Human Services Task Force | @themiaheck

Americans continue to experience an increase in the cost of health care, a trend largely advanced by the massive expansion of regulation triggered by implementation of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Last week, ALEC released its latest analysis Over Regulation Threatens Market-Driven Solutions in Dentistry, which outlines policies impacting state licensing regulations. Visit the ALEC website to find out more.

Subject: Update on the National Endowment for the Arts

Dear Colleagues,

Unfortunately, speculation that President Donald Trump would propose eliminating the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) has proven to be true. In his official budget request, President Trump has asked the U.S. Congress to zero out the NEA's budget.

Although this news is disappointing, we are nowhere near the end of the road for the NEA or public support of the arts. Consider the following:

National Arts Advocacy Day is especially well-timed this year. On March 20-21—that's this coming Monday and Tuesday—arts supporters from across the nation will descend on Washington to make their voices heard. For more resources and information on how you can be an effective arts advocate, get in touch with our state's arts advocacy organization, Ohio Citizens for the Arts, or get involved at the federal level through Americans for the Arts.

Stay calm, remain strong, and be confident. The NEA has weathered these types of debates before, and together, the arts community will persevere.

Until next time,

Subject: I urge you to not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

Dear Representative Reineke:

I urge you to not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

I believe that H.R. 785 would result in lowering my wages, weaken my pension and would create a less safe working environment for me and my co-workers.

Ignoring the facts about "right to work" far-right politicians across the country are promoting these deceptive policies as payback to their Big Business donors. By weakening workers' ability to have a say about their job, right to work weakens unions' ability to serve as an advocate for all workers and a check against corporate greed.

Without solid evidence to back their claims, the politicians advancing right-to-work legislation depend on a coordinated network of extremist right-wing groups to provide resources, research, and an echo chamber that pave the way for right to work.

Within the Railroad Industry, our union negotiates contracts for our members that provide good wages, continued vigilant oversight of safety and the protection of our pension (Railroad Retirement).

For all of Organized Labor, please do not support H.R.785 - The National Right to Work (is wrong) Legislation.

Sincerely,

Jason Ruffing

Dear Jason,

Thank you for writing to our office, describing your opposition to House Resolution 785- National Right to Work Legislation. This legislation is federal legislation however, meaning that Representative Reineke as a state representative does not have influence over the legislation's outcome, save for an extreme case where many states cooperate to change federal law. For this reason, if you have not done so already, I encourage you to contact your U.S. Congressman, Jim Jordan, who can be reached here:

If you have any other questions or concerns related to state government, please feel free to contact our office again.\

Best regards,

ARTS ADVOCACY DAY RECAP

As you know, last Thursday, President Donald Trump proposed eliminating the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) in his budget request to Congress. Without delay, advocates for the arts snapped into action to defend the importance of public funding for the arts.

Here at the Ohio Arts Council (OAC), we proudly carried the same message to Washington—public funding for the arts through the National Endowment for the Arts is essential.
